Richard Holbrooke	AfghanistanCzar	Ultra liberal anti gun former Gov. Of New Mexico. Pro Abortion and legal drug use. Wants to Dissolve the 2nd Amendment
Hannah Rosenthal	Anti-Semitism	Obama's new anti-Semitism czar serves on the board of a controversial Israel-lobby group accused of working against the Jewish state, while her writings suggest Israel's policies are to blame for anti-Semitism. Hannah Rosenthal, a former Health Department regional director under the Clinton administration, started her position earlier this week as the State Department's new special envoy to monitor and combat anti-Semitism. She previously headed the Jewish Council for Public Affairs, an umbrella U.S. Jewish organization. Rosenthal, however, serves on the board of J Street, a lobby group that is mostly led by left-leaning Israelis and that receives funds from Arab and Muslim Americans. J Street brands itself as pro-Israel. It states on its website it seeks to "promote meaningful American leadership to end the Arab-Israeli and Israeli-Palestinian conflicts peacefully and diplomatically." J Street, however, also supports talks with Hamas, a terrorist group whose charter seeks the destruction of Israel. The group opposes sanctions against Iran and is harshly critical of Israeli offensive anti-terror military actions. Even the Israeli government has been distancing itself from J Street, with its ambassador to Washington, Michael Oren, refusing to attend its annual dinner last month. Israeli Embassy spokesman Yoni Peled told the Jerusalem Post his government has some "concern over certain [J Street] policies that could impair Israel's interests."

Mark Lloyd	Diversity	The Lid blog has a report on Mark Lloyd, the associate general counsel and Chief Diversity Officer at the Federal Communications Commission, who said, "There are few things I think more frightening in the American mind than dark skinned black men. Here I am." He was appointed to the newly created position by Obama in early August. Before he was appointed a Czar, Lloyd was the vice president for strategic initiatives at the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. His specialty is communications policy, and that policy he promotes can only be described as having a strange obsession with promoting a racial divide. He is also not a big fan of the First Amendment. While Obama is playing coy with his plans to shut down conservative talk radio, we know what his real intentions are, due to his appointment of Mark Lloyd. Lloyd's view of the 1st Amendment is shocking: "It should be clear by now that my focus here is not freedom of speech or the press. This freedom is all too often an exaggeration. At the very least, blind references to freedom of speech or the press serve as a distraction from the critical examination of other communications policies. "[T]he purpose of free speech is warped to protect global corporations and block rules that would promote democratic governance." Like many of Obama's appointees, Lloyd worked for George Soros, the foreign billionaire who funds anti-America groups. He seems to be enamored with dictators and has even publicly praised Venezuelan Communist dictator Hugo Chavez's "incredible...democratic revolution." He also wants to use the Fairness Doctrine to "balance" talk radio and believes there are too many white people in the media. He has written that unless there are "more people of color, gays and other people...we will not change the problem." One of his solutions to "balance" the media is to fine conservative radio stations up to $250 million and give the proceeds to National Public Radio. Get ready for censorship like America has never seen before.

Chai R. Feldblum	Equal Opportunity	A law professor nominated by Obama to become a commissioner for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission was a signatory to a radical 2006 manifesto which endorsed polygamous households and argued traditional marriage should not be privileged "above all others." Georgetown University Law Center professor Chai R. Feldblum, nominated as a commissioner for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), is listed as a signatory to the July 26, 2006 manifesto "Beyond Same-Sex Marriage: A New Strategic Vision for All Our Families & Relationships." The manifesto's signatories said they proposed a "new vision" for governmental and private recognition of "diverse kinds" of partnerships, households and families. They said they hoped to "move beyond the narrow confines of marriage politics" in the U.S. Describing various kinds of households as no less socially, economically, and spiritually worthy than other relationships, the Beyond Marriage manifesto listed "committed, loving households in which there is more than one conjugal partner." Same-sex marriage, the manifesto said, should be "just one option on a menu of choices that people have about the way they construct their lives." "Marriage is not the only worthy form of family or relationship, and it should not be legally and economically privileged above all others," the manifesto continued. "While we honor those for whom marriage is the most meaningful personal – for some, also a deeply spiritual -- choice, we believe that many other kinds of kinship relationship, households, and families must also be accorded recognition." The manifesto listed as one of its principles "freedom from a narrow definition of our sexual lives and gender choices, identities, and expression." It also charged that the political right enforces "narrow, heterosexist definitions of marriage."
Joshua DuBois	Faith Based Czar	Political Black activist- Degree in Black Nationalism . Anti gun ownership lobbyist. WHAT DOES A FAITH BASED CZAR DO???????????????
Julius Genachowski	FCC	Julius Genachowski is Barack Obama's head of the Federal Communications Commission. He thinks you're an idiot. After famously calling for broadly expanded FCC powers to mandate "transparency" and "neutrality" on the Internet, and having that plan rejected by a growing, bipartisan coalition, he now denies he wants to regulate the Internet. Meanwhile he also claims the FCC is trying to "win the case" against Comcast, who has sued to get a federal court to overturn the FCC's claimed authority to regulate Internet activity. But we're supposed to believe he doesn't want to regulate the Internet. Right. The Wall Street Journal says that the FCC "took a beating" during an appeals court hearing on the case. A decision against the FCC could be crippling of Genachowski's plans, but unfortunately on that front there's nothing we activists can do but watch, and wait. Though we can also join in the second comment period that the FCC has opened up on Net Neutrality. Your guess is as good as mine as to where on the FCC's website we can do that, though. They're not exactly transparent.
Sam Krass	Food	The Corruption Chronicals says that in a comical move even for czar-happy Obama, who has rewarded dozens of cronies with distinguished titles, the White

		House has named the Obama's personal Chicago cook as "Senior Policy Adviser for Healthy Food Initiatives." It's no joke, even though it sounds like a bad one. The Chicago chef's rapid ascension, reported this week by a conservative Washington D.C. newspaper, has been kept under the radar for the last month. Sam Kass went from being a 20-something, Windy City gourmet cook -- privately paid by the Obama's to feed them -- to big-time White House adviser in a matter of months. In between, Michelle Obama made Kass a "Food Initiative Coordinator" for her new healthy nutrition program which is supposed to eliminate childhood obesity within a generation, especially in the nation's inner cities. The First Lady claims that childhood obesity is a threat to national security and a crisis equivalent to AIDS and youth violence. Because it's such a dire situation, she has convinced her husband's administration to spend $400 million a year to bring "healthy foods" to low-income neighborhoods and $10 billion to revise a decades-old federal measure that already feeds tens of millions of poor children at school for free. This culinary revolution no doubt requires a trusted senior policy adviser -- like Kass -- who is an expert in healthy cuisine. The First Lady refers to her cook as a "partner in crime" and says it's "just pretty powerful" to see what started out as talk in her South Side Chicago kitchen turn into a major initiative that "hopefully will change the way we think as a country." Makes you wonder what Kass, who also doubles as a White House chef, has been putting in the Obama's food all these years. Incidentally, the "most transparent administration" in history doesn't want Americans to know how much the famous family cook earns. Although he's an important administration worker, Kass's salary is excluded in the Annual Report to Congress on White House Staff because he's considered "residence staff" and those salaries don't need to be disclosed. More reparations from the Obamas -- $400 million a year to bring "healthy foods" to low-income neighborhoods -- $10 billion for poor children at school for free -- "because it's such a dire situation..." -- another CRISIS -- thank you Cloward and Piven -- thank you Rahmbo. Everything is a crisis to these people -- except the economy.

Susan P Crawford	Internet	WorldNetDaily is reporting that Obama's Internet czar, Susan P. Crawford, is linked to a Marxist-run liberal media think tank, Free Press, that advocates government intervention in the Internet. She was chosen to head up the Obama transition's Federal Communications Commission Review team. After the inauguration, Obama named her Special Assistant to the President for Science, Technology, and Innovation policy -- or Internet czar. Wired magazine calls Crawford "the most powerful geek close to the president," and notes that prior to her work for the administration, she was a "prolific" writer on "net neutrality." Crawford's "One Web Day" is also promoted on the Free Press website. She spoke at a May 14, 2009, "Changing Media" Free Press summit in Washington. Crawford's "One Web Day" project, which seeks to broaden the public's awareness of Internet and Web issues, lists the radical ACORN as one of its "participating organizations." Free Press" is listed as another. The founder of Free Press, Robert W. McChesney, is a professor at the University of Illinois and former editor of the Marxist journal Monthly Review. In February 2009, McChesney, an avowed Marxist, urged that capitalism be dismantled. "In the end, there is no real answer but to remove brick-by-brick the capitalist system itself, rebuilding the entire society on socialist principles," wrote McChesney in a column. The board of Free Press has included a slew of radicals, such as Obama's former "green jobs" czar Van Jones, who resigned after it was exposed he founded a communist organization. Meanwhile, Crawford and Kevin Werbach, who co-directed the Obama transition team's Federal Communications Commission Review team, are also advisory board members at Public Knowledge, a George Soros-funded public interest group. Public Knowledge claims to be bipartisan, working with groups from both sides of the aisle, including Free Press and the Open Society Institute.
Dawn Johnson	Legal	Obama's new head of the Office of Legal Counsel in the Justice Department, Dawn Johnson, called the legal reasoning which gave the president broad powers to authorize "rough" interrogation of terrorists "shockingly flawed...bogus...outlandish." She said it allowed "horrific acts" and demanded to know "Where is the outrage? The public outcry?" This is the person who will decide how to interrogate terrorists. If she errs on the side of weakening methods of questioning, there's no chance her boss, Eric Holder the new Attorney General, will reverse her. He approved of the Clinton/Reno "wall" preventing intelligence from finding out what criminal investigators had found out and took the lead in pardoning the FALN terrorists. What is Obama thinking? How could he weaken so dramatically our protections

		against terrorism? Doesn't he realize that without warrantless FISA wiretaps we could never have uncovered the plot to destroy the Brooklyn Bridge (how could we have gotten a warrant for conversations about the bridge when we didn't yet know that al Qaeda had it in its sights?) Has he forgotten that we only found the name of the operative who was tasked with destroying the bridge because we subjected Kahlid Mohammed, the mastermind of 9-11, to "rough" interrogation techniques? Does he really mean to leave us vulnerable to terrorist attacks?
